Barney Healy, former city councilman under the old Harper regime, is preserving order and conserving justice in extra session No. 1 of the Superior Court, as a bailiff. Healy started to work Thursday morning, March 7, as a sheriff. An effort was made some time ago to have the City Council appoint Healy as an officer of the street-cleaning department, but, although many citizens gave him their support, the council refused to give him a berth. As a deputy sheriff he receives $100 a month.
