The Local Candidate for City Council

Mayor Tom Bradley has strongly endorsed Peggy. The Mayor knows this district needs an energetic Council Leader, with the local knowledge necessary to get things done.

Police Chief Gates says "Peggy Stevenson is the best friend of law enforcement on the Council. Anyone concerned about fighting crime here will support her."

L.A. Fire Chief John Gerard says "Peggy heads the most important Committee on Fire Protection Services, so I know her work well. Peggy is the Best! Period!"

Peggy Stevenson continues to deliver, time and again, on Senior Citizen housing and Senior Citizen Centers. She delivers with new recreational centers. Peggy delivers with rent controls, consumer protection, transportation and new local police stations. She delivers with better fire protection and paramedic services. And Peggy Stevenson has done more for Hollywood revitalization than any other Member of the Council in the history of Los Angeles. So, why are the radical Santa Monica based "Economic Democracy Campaign" and the other outsiders trying to take away our local Member of the City Council? Well, it obviously is not for the good of the people!

Michael Woo-

An outsider's threat to our neighborhood

FACT: Michael Woo has confessed that he recently moved into our community.

FACT: Michael Woo has three main supporters:

1. The radical Santa Monica based "Economic Democracy Campaign" organization. Their Chairman said recently in an L.A. Times interview that his radical organization will "really go to town" to "significantly" help Woo.
2. Woo's former employer in Sacramento, who has put money and manpower into the Woo effort.
3. Woo's father, a wealthy Chinatown banker and absentee landlord. The senior Mr. Woo has put tens of thousands of dollars into the Woo campaign war chest.

FACT: Michael Woo knows nothing, and could care even less, about our community. He has been a candidate for political office virtually from the day he moved here. Clearly Michael Woo serves other political masters.

FACT: Because of the small voter turnout, the biggest spending political campaign in the history of our District, and the support of the radical "Economic Democracy Campaign", Michael Woo almost grabbed our Council seat with the ballots of just 17% of the registered voters here.

If you want to stop this threat to our neighborhood, you must vote on Tuesday, June 2nd.

Peggy with her son at their home of 28 years. Peggy was raised right here in this very neighborhood and Council District. Her parents immigrated here from Greece. She has lived here all her life, she went to school here, worked here, married here, was widowed here, and has raised her son here. Peggy is truly one of us. No one could know this community better.

3 races, 3 surprises as Stevenson, Finn and Flores win

L.A. CITY COUNCIL 6/3/81
A, B

All three City Council races ended in surprises last night: a landslide for 13th District Councilwoman Peggy Stevenson, a win for underdog Howard Finn in the 1st District, and a squeaker for Joan Milke Flores, the heavy favorite in the 15th District.

Stevenson, the incumbent, won a stunning victory against a strong challenge from Michael Woo, a 29-year-old legislative aide.

Stevenson, 56, a six-year council veteran, came back after a close shave in the primary to soundly defeat the well-organized and well-financed Woo campaign.

"We ran a campaign this time — we ran a real campaign and that was successful," said an ebullient Stevenson last night. "I think I'm a stronger person for this."

Stevenson said she did not regret the tone of her campaign mail, which was criticized for having racial overtones: "It was a truthful campaign, it was hard-hitting."

In conceding, Woo said last night, "Many people come to Hollywood with dreams. With this campaign, a dream has been born and the dream lives on."

"We showed that people care about crime ... inadequate housing ... transportation and ... deteriorating neighborhoods."

"I intend to continue the role I established in this campaign — as a strong voice, a catalyst for change, a unifying force ..."

Stevenson attributed her win in part to the high voter turnout in her district, about 10 percent above the 30 percent turnout in the rest of the city.

Woo's strong showing in the primary — he got 41 percent of the vote to Stevenson's 44 percent — had stunned the councilwoman.

She hired the well-known Butcher-Forde Consulting firm to take over her runoff campaign, and came out swinging. Her campaign launched an aggressive mail campaign attacking Woo's age, his recent move to the district and his base of support.

Her repeated references to Woo as an "outsider" supported by a "small minority from outside the district," and to his father as a "wealthy Chinatown banker" trying to "buy" a council seat for his son, brought strong criticism.

"One of the theories in a campaign is that you go ahead and attack and you live through the backlash," said one City Hall political observer. "Her hanging tough was the ideal thing to do."

Woo tried to hit Stevenson's record on crime and the revitalization of Hollywood, and while his campaign appeared to generate more enthusiasm and grass-roots support than any other race, it was not enough.

Stevenson-Woo City Council campaign a study in styles

Last-minute drive vs. grass-roots challenge

By Susan Schmidt
Herald Examiner staff writer

About 100 loyalists gathered last night at a private fund-raiser to help incumbent Peggy Stevenson keep her 13th District seat on the City Council.

The $500-a-plate party, sponsored by Mayor Tom Bradley, Council President John Ferraro and state Assemblyman Mike Roos, was closed to the press, and Stevenson's campaign directors refused to disclose how many contributors attended. Estimates on the size of the crowd came from sources at the restaurant, Lawry's California Center.

Across town at the same time, at the Golden Dragon Restaurant in Chinatown, more than 800 persons paid $200 each to help her opponent, Michael Woo.

The difference in last night's fund-raisers reflects the level of activity in each of the two campaigns. Woo appears to have relied on building up a strong grass-roots constituency, as evidenced by his surprisingly strong showing in the April primary. Stevenson, meanwhile, apparently is hoping an aggressive, last-minute effort aided by a professional campaign manager can beat back her opponent's challenge.

In contrast to the scores of Woo volunteers who have canvassing precincts for weeks, Stevenson's campaigners only recently began walking precincts, and include paid hrs hired to flesh out a cadre of volunteers.

With June 2 election just a week and a half away, Stevenson, for the first time, has begun stepping out to meet the voters.

Stevenson's campaign staffers, who huffed at the threat posed by Woo in the primary, now have added the posture of an underdog all but acknowledge that they'll have to stretch to win a runoff Tuesday.

After a close shave in the April 14 primary election — in which her 44 percent of the vote barely edged Woo's 41 percent — Stevenson admitted she had taken her challenger too lightly.

Stevenson has been a vocal defender of gay rights on the City Council, and sees the large gay population in her district as a solid base of support. She also is counting on support she has received in the past from hillside homeowners and senior citizens.

Until recently, Stevenson had maintained there were no issues in the race. Now she says the only issue is Michael Woo himself — his background, his age, his support.

At 29, Woo is an energetic campaigner who has spent months appearing before community groups and walking a district that stretches from Hollywood to Highland Park.

His campaign has been aimed at drawing a broad base of support from residents unhappy with the rising crime rate and the general decline of the area, particularly Hollywood.

Woo, a Chinese-American, would be the first Asian-American to serve on the City Council, if elected. He is on leave from his job with state Senate President Pro Tem David Roberti, a Democrat who represents much of the 13th Council District. Woo moved from Sacramento in December to enter the council race.

He has tried to paint Stevenson as lazy and ineffective, but his strategy has been to steer clear of outright attacks on his opponent. "I don't want people to think that I'm a young punk beating up on a poor widow," says Woo.

Butcher-Forde Consulting, the firm hired to manage Stevenson's post-primary campaign, has taken an increasingly aggressive approach in directing the final leg of her campaign. She hired the Orange County firm that ran the successful campaign for Proposition 13 to replace the small, largely-volunteer staff that ran her primary campaign.

In addition to help in fund raising, the mayor and members of the City Council have come to Stevenson's aid in indirect ways. This week, for example, the council approved spending $300,000 in funds initially budgeted for new garbage trucks on an anti-gang plan proposed by Stevenson.

Although she got less than half the funds she had requested, her success in getting any plan through the council in this period of tight budget deliberations was seen as likely to add steam to her campaign.

The Woo camp nevertheless is warily optimistic, although they fear last-minute attacks and a strong mail campaign could help Stevenson pick up more support.

In particular, they fear that Butcher-Forde's tactics in the waning days of the campaign — which they say have taken on a racist tone — could garner support from voters who resent the influx of immigrants into the district in recent years.

"I think that her mailers are definitely making a lot of subtle, indirect racist implications," said Woo.

An editorial in the B'nai B'rith Messenger yesterday entitled "Bigotry Unmasked" attacked Stevenson's literature for its "play upon Mr. Woo's ethnicity."

Woo said that during the past week his campaign office has been contacted by about 30 voters who were called by the Stevenson campaign. The voters complained that questions and comments to them made by Stevenson workers about Woo were racist in nature.

Woo campaign coordinator Lynn Meltzer said many of the callers objected to the characterization of Woo's father as a "wealthy Chinatown banker," who has bankrolled his "outsider" son to buy the election.

Stevenson said this week she knew nothing about any telephone survey and did not think her mailers had racist overtones.

"They've already raised the issue in the primary," said Pryor. "It would be lunacy on our part to do what they say we are doing."

The Stevenson campaign was criticized for sending out mailers in the primary that asked Republican voters if they wanted the candidate supported by the Mexican American Political Association and the Asian Democratic Caucus, "or Councilwoman Peggy Stevenson."

Stevenson said those mailers were not meant to raise racial questions, but to point up Woo's "ultraliberal" support.

One recent mailer tells voters that Woo's support comes from the "radical" Santa Monica-based Campaign for Economic Democracy, and from his father, "a wealthy Chinatown banker and absentee landlord."

CED has supplied Woo with about 25 campaign workers, but has made no significant financial contribution.

Woo's father, Wilbur Woo, is executive vicepresident of the Cathay Bank of Los Angeles. Pryor said that because the senior Woo does not live in the 13th District, his ownership of a shopping center in Los Feliz makes him an "absentee landlord."

The mailer concludes with an appeal that says: "We can't just let a small minority from outside our community force Michael Woo down our throats."

Pryor said Woo's recent move to the district and the support he has received from Chinatown, CED and Roberti make him "an outsider."

"Race, color, creed has nothing to do with it," Pryor said.

Stevenson and Pryor said they believe the financial support Woo has received from his father is a legitimate campaign issue.

The elder Woo contributed $30,000 of the $175,000 Woo spent in the primary campaign, and Woo said he expects his father to contribute equally for the runoff election.

Home Program Progresses

Councilwoman Peggy Stevenson obtained funding under the Housing and Community Development Act for the rehabilitation of single and multiple dwelling units in the Northeast area of the 13th District. The program is known as the Homeowners Opportunity Maintenance Effort (HOME).

The HOME program provides low interest loans at 6 and in some cases 3 percent for the refurbishment of housing. Over 120 homes have been completed and 200 more are in the rehabilitation process now. Loans of approximately $1,140,000 have been made to private homeowners.

Additional funds have been allocated for public improvements in this area including work on streets, gutters, sidewalks, and tree planting.

Opportunities of participation in this program are still available. Further information can be obtained from the HOME office at 5025 York Boulevard or by calling 254-9291.

The HOME program in the Northeast has proven to be the most successful in Los Angeles. Consequently, it has been expanded to the Hollywood area to benefit even more 13th District residents. For information on this newly added area call 464-4912 or visit the HOME office at 6043 Hollywood Boulevard.

Highland Park Revitalization

Revitalization plans for Highland Park moved forward in April with the appointment of Ralph Schloming as Director of the program.

Mr. Schloming comes to Highland Park with extensive experience in urban planning, grantsmanship, business and education. He will serve as coordinator for the main improvement projects proposed for the area. Working with local merchants, community residents and government agencies, he will provide assistance and expertise as revitalization plans are implemented.

These plans include seeking funding sources for improvement projects, attempting to attract new businesses to the area, conducting a study on the economic feasibility of developing a shopping mall in Highland Park and identifying pressing needs in the community which should be addressed by residents and government.

Members of the Board of Directors of the Highland Park Revitalization Committee are Jesse W. Ivers, Chairman, Robert W. Roberts, Cesar F. Ruiz, Bruce Garvey, Neil Miller, Lonee T. Suter, Fran Padilla, Millard Mier, and Joseph Lazaroni, Secretary. Local offices for the Committee are scheduled to open shortly.

HOLLYWOOD GROWS

The past year has been exciting for Hollywood. Along with 75th anniversary celebrations there have been substantial improvements to the area and many more plans initiated to contribute to revitalization efforts. Following is a sample of recent and future accomplishments made possible by hard work and cooperation between residents, business people and government.

- * The Hollywood Senior Citizen Multipurpose Center has opened and is meeting a wide variety of needs for the elderly of the community. They will be moving to larger and better facilities within the year.
- * A $186 million hotel-exhibition center has been proposed for Hollywood and is in the planning stage, and the Holiday Inn is preparing to add 300 additional rooms as well as convention facilities to its Highland Avenue location with an investment of $30 million.
- * Children's Hospital has completed its $9 million George C. Page Building and is now constructing the "Ronald McDonald House," a home away from home for the families of seriously ill children under treatment at the hospital.
- * New construction of additional residential units is underway in many locations such as Grace Avenue, Franklin Avenue, and Winona Boulevard.
- * Business expansion is taking place throughout the community. ABC is constructing additional facilities on Prospect Avenue at a cost of $7 million. A&M Records has undergone a multimillion dollar expansion adjacent to its offices on La Brea Avenue. Renovations are underway at the former Columbia Studios located at Sunset and Gower Street where movie and TV production will increase. Metromedia is investing $2 million in a renovation and expansion project at its Sunset Boulevard headquarters.

- * Mann Theatres has constructed two additional theatres at a cost of $3 million to enhance their world famous landmark, the Chinese Theatre. Another landmark, the Hollywood Palace, is being converted to an entertainment complex containing a discotheque, recording studios and a restaurant. The Center Theatre

Park Donated to Hollywood

On January 10, 1979 the 13th District's newest park was dedicated in Hollywood. Located at the southeast corner of Franklin and Sycamore Avenues, Hollywood-Franklin Park will provide a pleasant oasis of green for neighborhood residents to use and enjoy.

Development of the park was made possible through the donation of land by Dorothy and Benjamin Smith, long-time Los Angeles residents who wished to make this lasting contribution to the community. It will be maintained by the City's Department of Recreation and Parks.

Councilwoman Stevenson was particularly pleased to officially open the new park as it represents another asset to the Hollywood community and demonstrates the happy result of combining both private and public resources to provide needed services to the area.

Group has acquired the Aquarium Theatre and is now presenting live performances at the renovated building.

Acquisitions and work in these and other important Hollywood businesses represent millions of dollars, jobs and tourists coming into the community. Construction projects are visible all around the Hollywood area and they signify a commitment to the positive growth taking place in our community.

HOLLYWOOD SIGN REBUILT

On November 11, 1978, commemorating the 75th anniversary of the formation of Hollywood, our new Hollywood Sign was officially unveiled. The replacement of this world-famous landmark was made possible by the donations of Andy Williams, Alice Cooper, KTLA owner Gene Autry, Hugh Hefner, Terence Donnelly of Meredith Newspapers, motion picture producer Giovanni Mazza, auto Blue Book publisher Les Kelley, and Dennis Lidtke of The Palace.

The original sign, built in 1923, had been deteriorating for years and had been refurbished a number of times. The situation became critical last year, however, as several letters crumbled and serious damage was evident.

The Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, cooperating with Councilwoman Stevenson's office, spearheaded a determined effort to rally community support and "Save the Sign." Its importance as a symbol of Hollywood's special mystique and identity was recognized and the successful result can now be seen high on the hills overlooking our City.

The new sign is a visible reminder that Hollywood is not only a unique home town but an internationally known center of glamor and dreams as well. It also demonstrates what can be accomplished when private interests are willing to give of themselves and work together with government in a successful effort to achieve their goals.

EXPLOSIVE SITE HALTED

Late in 1978 Union Oil Company asked the City for a permit to construct a petroleum loading and storage facility in the Taylor Train Yard located in the northeast section of the 13th District. The train yard adjoins the residential communities of Glassell Park and Atwater. This proposal represented a substantial threat to the health and safety of neighborhood residents.

Citing the extreme danger of storing highly volatile materials in the midst of a residential neighborhood, Councilwoman Stevenson protested this potential hazard and was supported by community residents.

As a result of determined opposition from both citizens and City Hall, Union Oil abandoned their plans to construct the facility. Mrs. Stevenson gave credit to the efforts of the neighborhood association in Atwater, Elysian Valley, Glassell Park, Silver Lake, Mt. Washington, Cypress Park, and Montecito Heights. The decisive actions of these groups contributed in large part to the successful solution of a significant community problem.

CONSTRUCTION ON HIGHLAND PARK PLAZA on Figueroa Street and Avenue 54 begins in August 1979. This neighborhood shopping mall is adjacent to the Highland Park Revitalization area and will include a food market and specialty shops for residents.

Elysian Valley Rec Center Opens

On December 1, 1978 the new Elysian Valley Recreation Center was formally dedicated. Built with $750,000 of Public Works Title I funds obtained through the efforts of Councilwoman Peggy Stevenson, this facility represents a great asset to the community.

The new center fulfills a long-standing desire of area residents for improved recreation facilities and accommodations for community meetings. Located at 1811 Ripple Street, the facility includes an auditorium seating 600 and full commercial kitchen equipment. The sports field has lighting for night use and showers have been provided for sports participants. The building has 10,000 square feet of space for a variety of community meetings and activities.

Planning for this project spanned a number of years and the dedication of the center marked successful completion of a community asset which both residents and government worked hard to build.

Emergency Shelter Sought

Where can you go if your apartment building is shut down because the City has determined it is unsafe?

This situation recently arose in Hollywood and it quickly became clear that dispossessed tenants had no where to turn for housing. Individuals and families in these circumstances may find themselves literally out on the street, on short notice, with few resources.

Noting that the City has no adequate system to deal with dispossessed tenants, Councilwoman Stevenson initiated discussions in City Hall to seek a solution to the problem. As a result, Los Angeles has submitted a grant application for federal funding to set up an emergency housing referral system. If the grant is approved the City will begin providing referrals to tenants who find themselves in need of short term shelter.

MEMBER OF THE CITY COUNCIL

Dear Friend:

Our community faces a real threat from outside political forces. It is, therefore, especially urgent that you vote in the June 2nd City Election this year.

That is why I have enclosed an Application for a Ballot by mail, if you want or need to vote by mail.

You see, in the Primary Election last month, very few people voted. As a result an outsider nearly grabbed our Council seat with the votes of just 17% of the registered voters!

Michael Woo moved into our community recently for the sole purpose of trying to take away our City Council seat.

Woo's support comes from three places:

1. His former political employer in Sacramento.

2. His father who is a wealthy Chinatown banker and absentee landlord. The senior Mr. Woo has poured tens of thousands of dollars into the political campaign war chest of his young son.

3. From the radical "Economic Democracy Campaign" organization. The group's Chairman said in a L.A. Times interview that his organization will "really go to town" to "significantly" help Woo.

Obviously Michael Woo knows nothing about our community, and could care even less. He serves different political masters.

My parents immigrated to this neighborhood from Greece. I was educated, married, widowed and have raised my son here. I have lived and worked here during my entire career. I really want to stop these powerful outside political forces from taking over our community!

Don't you?

If so, fill out and mail your Ballot Application today to vote by mail.

You may, of course, choose to go to the polls and vote. If so, be sure to remember to vote. We just can't let a small minority from outside our community force Michael Woo down our throats!

Sincerely,

Peggy Stevenson
