"Joy of music"

THE GRAND MARSHALL LAWRENCE WELK

Keeping the rhythm for Pasadena's traditional year-beginning festivities on New Year's Day, 1972, themed "The Joy of Music," will be Lawrence Welk, the Champagne Music maestro, who will be the Grand Marshal.

Virgil J. White, Tournament president, in bestowing this high honor, stated, "Music will fill the air during our New Year's Day events in Pasadena. Grand Marshal Lawrence Welk will lead the famed floral parade of 59 spectacular floats with a musical motif, 23 bands of 2,500 colorfully uniformed musicians and 180 silver adorned equestrian units."

The famed maestro said in response, "This is one of the finest things that has ever happened to me. For many years, I have admired Pasadena's gift of beauty to the world. I shall do everything possible to make the 1972 Tournament of Roses the best in history."

The career of the renowned bandsman reads like the saga of Horatio Alger—an accordion playing North Dakota farm boy to fame and fortune as a music maker with a television audience of 50 million viewers.

Welk is quite familiar with the January 1st events in the City of Roses, having ridden on a float with the Lennon sisters during the early 50's. He has also hosted the Rose Queens and their Courts on his television shows for the past 15 years.

The newly named Grand Marshal will give the signal for the start of the 83rd Annual Tournament of Roses parade, and then ride in the lead rose-covered automobile with his wife, Fern.

The Welks will participate in the pre-game ceremonies at the Rose Bowl as they circle the stadium in an open automobile with President and Mrs. White and the Royal Court just before the kickoff.

Grand Marshal Welk will also attend the Membership Reception, Coronation of the Rose Queen, Kickoff Luncheon, Participants Reception and the Directors Dinner.

Max Colwell, Executive Secretary and Manager, Tournament of Roses

Virgil J. White, President

Virgil J. White, a longtime Pasadena businessman, will serve as president of the 83rd Annual Tournament of Roses.

In addition to making official visitations to many points in the North American continent, he will be a vital factor in the planning for the 1972 festivities, working with both staff personnel and the 1,400 men in the white suits.

President White is a native of Springville, Iowa, attending elementary schools in Whittier, Iowa, and high school in Barnesville, Ohio. He has been a resident of Pasadena, California, since 1928.

He resides in Pasadena, with his wife, Helen, and two sons.

The 1972 Tournament head was active in the activities of the Pasadena Junior Chamber of Commerce, serving as vice president and then representing the organization on the Jaycee's national council. He also held the post of vice president of the Pasadena Kiwanis Club, having the distinction of never missing a meeting during his 20 years of membership.

White has been a longtime member of the Pasadena YMCA and Y'S Men's Club, receiving honors from the latter for his community contributions during his 35 years of membership.

President White joined the Tournament in 1940 and proceeded through the various membership categories as follows: patron (1946); associate (1947); and regular (1949).

He became a member of the policy-making executive committee in 1967 and held the offices of secretary and then treasurer in 1970 and 1971 respectively. He has been the chairman of 14 committees and a member of 22 planning units, serving a total of 31 years.

Max Colwell, Executive Secretary and Manager, Tournament of Roses

The man who anchors the Tournament of Roses is Max Colwell, Manager and Executive Secretary. He is the man with the wisdom and the answers. He is also the man with the patience and wise counsel for the volunteers who stage this beauteous spectacle.

He coordinates the efforts of 600 committeemen working on 30 committees. It was through his efforts that television was introduced to the two New Year's Day events.

It was in 1922, as a Pasadena High School Editor that he wrote his first story on the Rose Parade. He then covered the event as a staff member of the Pasadena Post, Pasadena Star, Los Angeles Times and the Los Angeles Express. Then, he worked up to the Executive Committee and finally to the ranks of the officers. He accepted the post of Manager in 1952. It is during the regime of Max Colwell that the Tournament of Roses has ascended to the heights as the world's greatest floral parade. Wisely, quietly and unpretentiously, he played a major role in charting the course.

"Joy of music"

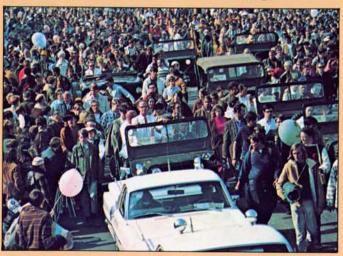

"The Joy of Music" is an apt theme for the 83rd annual floral spectacle. 21 bands from all over the country will participate in the two hour parade. Paradoxically the City of Pasadena, in its early history passed an ordinance prohibiting the playing of band music on the city streets because it frightened the horses. It was the influence of the Salvation Army that brought about a repeal of the ordinance.

This year's theme and band participation on New Year's morning will be suitably highlighted by the Grand Marshal, Lawrence Welk.

The music committee of the Tournament of Roses carefully screens the applications of bands across the nation and makes recommendations for the selections of bands that will add color and interest to the parade.

Bands of the Universities participating in the Rose Bowl game appear near the front of the parade and the Tournament's official band from Pasadena City College will lead the pageant.

During the 82 year history of the Tournament of Roses parade it has only rained on the day of the event seven times. Spectators for the extravaganza often take up residence along famed Orange Grove Avenue and Colorado Boulevard the day and evening before. Once the colorful bands, flower bedecked floats, horses with silver trappings and riders come into view it doesn't matter if you stand or have a grandstand or curbside seat.

As the warm sun of the Pasadena New Year's morning dispels the chill, the crowd buzzes with excitement anticipating the grandeur about to pass before their view. While the thousands of people in Pasadena look on, it is estimated that some 100 million others in the United States and parts of the world view the "world's greatest parade" on television. CBS and NBC carry the event on a combined total of nearly 500 stations in the United States.

Wrigley Gardens is the site of the permanent home of the Tournament of Roses Association. The "Tournament House," as it is affectionately known, was the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William Wrigley, Jr., famous chewing gum manufacturer of Chicago from 1914 until 1958.

William Wrigley and his family were always interested in and proud of their involvement with the Tournament of Roses.

In 1959 the Wrigley heirs wished to perpetuate this close association by donating the residence and gardens, comprising approximately four and one-half acres, to the City of Pasadena as the headquarters for the Tournament of Roses.

Located on South Orange Grove Boulevard, the "Tournament House" is not furnished to be a museum but a working setting for the many Tournament activities throughout the year.

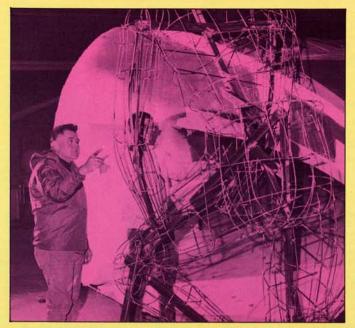

On New Year's Day in Pasadena, the holiday parade viewers will see the world's greatest assemblage of equestrian units. The sleek mounts, shining silver trappings, and colorful costumes add to the pageantry.

The Long Beach Mounted Police again appear in the procession's forefront, each rider holding aloft the color of Old Glory.

The dedicated horsemen and horsewomen appearing in the pageant travel for many miles to make this appearance in Pasadena. Most of them have travelled all night before the big event and have brought their mounts by van into the staging area just as the sun peeps over the eastern horizon. The period in the assembly area prior to the beginning of the procession is a busy one. There are the adjustments to the harness, saddles, and gear. Often a last minute grooming is given to the mounts.

A little more than two hours later, after the parade is over, the chores begin again in the disbanding area at Victory Park. It takes a lot of effort and planning to ride in the Rose Parade, but all who love horses and parades are certain it is worth the effort expended.

Picturesque floats glide down the Pasadena Tournament of Roses five and one-half mile parade route only once each year, but the float construction business is a year-round operation. Just ask the many dedicated and talented float decorators. Most are professional designers who contract with the 60 cities, organizations, and commercial firms that enter floats in the Rose Parade.

In March of each year a theme contest is held with suggestions coming from all over the United States and many points in Canada. From these suggestions the Tournament president, assisted by the Float Committee, selects the theme for the upcoming parade. Decorators then submit for approval ideas in keeping with the theme, accompanied by rough sketches, showing what individual floats will eventually look like.

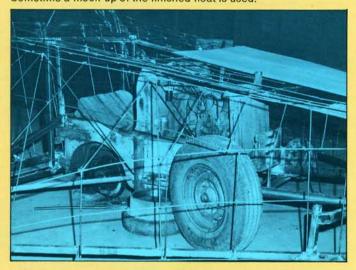

Decorating the floats with fresh flowers begins some 48 hours before the parade with the hardier blossoms being applied first. These are usually chrysanthemums. Some of the more delicate blooms are placed on the floats only a few hours before the parade starts. Roses, gardenias, and orchids are almost invariably placed in water vials or test tubes which are concealed from view. Where test tubes are used, they are filled with water and a chemical preservative added to keep the flowers fresh longer.

Many different kinds of flowers are used to obtain color designs, though emphasis is placed upon the use of roses. Other popular flowers are stock, chrysanthemums, delphinium, cornflowers, orchids (imported from Hawaii, including cattleya, cymbidium, and vanda), marigolds, snapdragons, sweet peas, and others. Greenery consisting of leaves, heather, and Ti leaves are also used to Flowers are attached to the cocooned face of the float with the aid of a special type of glue which has a plastic rubber base. Also a cold paste, impervious to water, is sometimes used.

From the rough sketch comes a final color design, or rendering. Sometime a mock-up of the finished float is used.

Floats range in cost from $10,000 to $30,000. Some are equipped with extensive hydraulic and electrical systems to provide animation, which increases the cost.

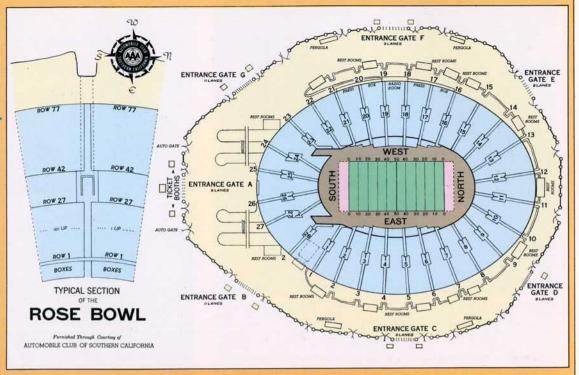

The first requisite in the construction is a stripped-down automobile, jeep, or truck chassis. The chassis, rebuilt with an extra large radiator, also has a place for a spare water tank, two drivers, and telephone, and must have an engine in top condition to endure the arduous 2½ mile-per-hour pace of the parade.

Motionless floral beauty is on display at Victory Park following the parade. Thousands more will have the opportunity to inspect the flower covered floats New Year's Day and the day following. Victory Park, located at Paloma Street and Sierra Madre Boulevard, is the terminus of the parade. The floats are available for viewing from 1:30 p.m. until 5:00 p.m. New Year's Day and 9:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. on January 2.

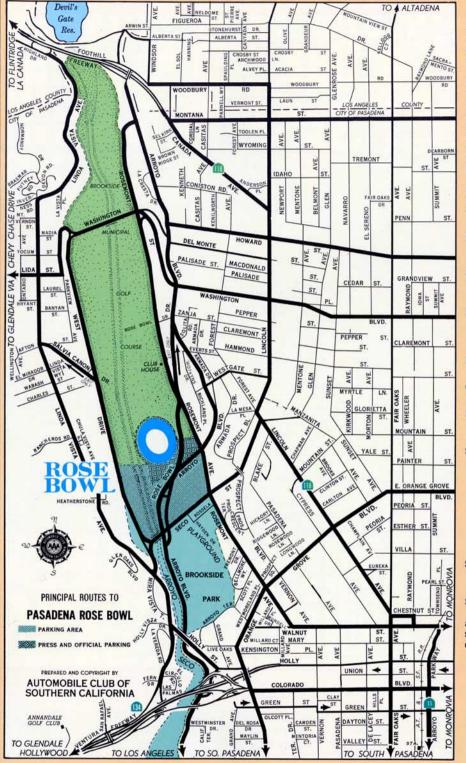

Interest is keen in the winning floats. Judging is done in the early morning hours on New Year's Day. The major award winners are decided upon first-Sweepstakes right on through to the Princess Award. Then comes the decisions on winners in the 33 competitive classes.

FOOTBALL RETURNS TO PASADENA

The first intersectional football game on New Year's Day in Pasadena was in 1902 when Coach Fielding H. (Hurry-Up) Yost's great point-a-minute University of Michigan team were persuaded to play a comparatively weak Stanford University team.

Willie Heston was Michigan's star halfback and his team piled up a total of 1463 yards in a 49 to 0 victory. This game netted the unheard of sum of nearly $4,000 for the Tournament Association.

When eastern teams could not be persuaded to come to Pasadena, the chariot race provided the exciting entertainment on New Year's afternoon until 1916. The return of football to Pasadena on New Year's day that year was celebrated by an invitation to Brown University to play Washington State.

William H. (Lone Star) Dietz, Washington State coach, and his team had an undefeated season. Brown University had a guard by the name of Wallace Wade, who later years, as a coach, brought his Alabama teams to the Rose Bowl.

A heavy drizzle started toward the end of the parade and by game time it had become a heavy rain. The field was extremely muddy and the players, when tackled, made more yardage skidding than in running.

Washington State won the game 14 to 0. Reunions of the two teams in that game have been held on New Year's Day in 1956 and 1966.

The 1902 point-a-minute University of Michigan team.

THERE'S A NEW LOOK AT THE FAMED ROSE BOWL

Pasadena's Rose Bowl, host to the acknowledged "grand-daddy" of all college football games each New Year's Day, is improving with age.

Shortly after Ohio State defeated Southern California 27-16 on January 1, 1969, "granddaddy" had his face lifted, his eyes fixed, and pipes improved.

The 50-year-old Arroyo Seco stadium is now both modern and sleek.

Every permanent Rose Bowl seat is new. More than 94,000 allweather aluminum benches have replaced the old splintery wooden seats with another 3,562 red theatre-type loge seats added near the floor of the stadium.

Bowl seating is now 101,306, and with press and band tickets added, "granddaddy" will officially hold 102,016 although 103,878 witnessed Southern California's 10-3 victory over Michigan on January 1, 1970. The higher figure included ushers and other stadium personnel.

"Granddaddy" has new eyes, too — 96 multi-vapor lamps and fixtures replacing the 35-year old system on the six existing light towers. The lamps, which represent the latest breakthrough in stadium lighting, have increased illumination on the field six times and will provide color cameras ample light to televise Rose Bowl action after the sun sets over the stadium's rim.

The players' benches are now recessed in an 18-inch concrete dugout, amply covered with thick green padding. Hopefully, the loge seat ticket holder will have an unobstructed view of the playing field. And for those who keep statistics on such things, the number of rest rooms for the fairer sex have doubled over 1969.

The total cost? Roughly $540,000 has been spent, some $267,000 more than it took to construct the original "Tournament of Roses Stadium" in 1922. The competing Pacific 8 and Big 10 conferences are paying five-sixths of the costs out of game income, with the Pasadena Tournament of Roses Association providing the other sixth.

This unique cost-sharing plan also made possible renovation of the press box and dressing room facilities in the early 1960s.

There's more work to be done, too. Work this year will center on the construction of permanent concession booths.
